This is a unique art form that brings dimensional life to images of everyday objects and offers a new and intriguing way of observing and appreciating the objects around us.

I have developed a creative process that brings unexpected depth and beauty to the normal flatness of realistic images. I was inspired by the varying distance-related tonal and dimensional gradations of landscapes to synthesize the effect and apply it to small, tangible objects.

My approach to each subject is unique, and so each work is truly an original, and is signed and dated as such. There is no single image file to create a piece. Rather, the "one-off" picture is assembled from a series, or progression, of separate files without copies.
